Non-Resistance.

BY T. S. ARTHUR.

[CONCLUDED.]

Mr. Anderson made his advertisement offering a liberal reward for the arrest of the housebreakers and recovery of his money. But it was all in vain. No trace of either his property or the men could be found. It was a few months only from the period of the robbery, when the excitement in regard to it had nearly died away in the interest that other and more recent occurrences had naturally awakened, that Mr. Walton found himself placed in circumstances very similar to those that had presented themselves to his friend Anderson. In the middle of the night he was awakened from sleep, and soon became aware that some one was endeavoring to open the door of the room in which himself and wife and two younger children were sleeping. For a moment his heart fluttered, and sent the blood with suffocating repletion to his lungs. But he soon grew calm and self possessed. Softly getting out of bed, he took out a large pistol. His pistol he carefully examined, placed in it a fresh cap, and then with a heavy stick by his side awaited the success of the intruder or intruders in their attempts to enter his chamber. The removal of the key from the lock seemed to be the effort of those outside. It was moved and turned as if by a pair of small pincers inserted into the keyhole. At last it fell, with a slight noise upon the carpet. Now came the exciting moment,—A false key was, in a little while, inserted, and the bolt sprung. Then came another pause, after which the door gentle opened. Mr. Walton had placed himself so that he would be partly behind the door, and thus unperceived. In a moment after a stout man, carrying in one hand a dark lantern, and in the other a heavy club, steped in noiselessly, and commenced moving with hurried glances the position of things in the chamber. Before, however, this rapid examination was completed, he fell stunned to the floor by a tremendous blow from Mr. Walton's heavy stick.

Simultaneously with the fall of the robber, came the sound of rapidly retreating footsteps along the passage without. Swinging open the door instantly, Mr. Walton saw a man just in the act of descending the stairs. Takeing at him deliberate aim he fired, and had the satisfaction to hear him fall heavily upon the landing. Then returning to his chamber he threw open a window and raised a cry of alarm. Watchmen were in the neighborhood and came at once.—Descending to let them in, Mr. Walton found the man he had shot lying where he had fallen, while a large pool of blood had formed around him.—He did not move. The entrance of the watchmen relieved him from further care over his fallen enemies, who were removed—the first with only a broad, black, tumefied mark from Mr. Walton's cane on his ear and the side of his face, and the other with a ball inside his shoulder blade, the extraction of which caused him most excruciating pain; but left in no danger of his life.

Circumstances came out on the trial of these men, who were convicted, and sentenced to ten years imprisonment in the penitentiary, which made it clear that they were the same who had broken into Anderson's house, and escaped punishment on that occasion from his childish misapprehension of his duty as a man.

'There now, my friend,' remarked Walton to him after the trial and conviction, 'all this trouble has been brought upon me, because you did not resist evil when it encroached upon you a few months ago. Had you then opposed force you might have saved your property and prevented the depredation that the villains who escaped from you were emboldened to attempt upon me.'

'I was wrong in that, I am fully convinced,' Anderson replied.

'And not only wrong in that, but wrong in other matters.'

'In what?'

'That affair of Fisher, for instance.'

'Oh, don't mention him again, if you please. I cannot expose Mr. Fisher. I am content to suffer wrong for the good of the whole.'

'Surely it cannot be for the good of the whole to permit a specious scoundrel to be in their midst and his quality unknown, and if he has deliberately cheated you, he will as deliberately cheat others.'

'But he stands so high, Mr. Walton. Last Sunday he went to the communion table.—I saw him myself. He is said to be getting very pious. Perhaps he has repented already of the wrong he did me.'

'Has he made restitution?'

'No.'

'Has he offered to do so?'

'No.'

'Then I wouldn't give that (snapping his fingers) for his piety. A mere cloak under which the more successfully to carry out his evil intentions.'

'I don't konw, I am inclined to hope better things—though he did cheat me most shamefully.'

'And you are not the only one that I hear complaining of him. I wish he would only try one of his games upon me. I reckon I'd show him up in less then no time.'

Time passed on, and Fisher, who has been several times alluded to, went on prosperously in business. He was director in one of the insurance companies, also director in two banks, president of a Bible Society, active member of a state missionary society, subscriber to various benevolent funds, and all a very pious member of the church. So popular a man had he become, that even Mr. Anderson, whose indignation at having been cheated by him had been so warm as to prevent him had for some time holding any intercourse with him, began to feel honored in being seen in his company. Fisher's business had, likewise, become very much extended.—From his connection with monied institutions, he had the command of as much capital as he wanted, and this he was using to the best possible advantage. But as his facilities increased, his ideas became more extensive, and his head, consequently, filled with new schemes and plans by which to acquire immense wealth. At last the idea struck him of getting control of a banking institution, as the readiest means of accomplishing the ends he had in view. To do this, it would be necessary in this first place to manage the stock in such a way as to get himself elected president. The capital was two hundred thousand dollars. His first movement was to ascertain the names of the shareholders. Of the two thousand shares of stock that made up the capital of the institution, he was satisfied that he was satisfied that he could readily manage one fourth, by direct application and through pliant friends.—To make sure of a majority of votes at the annual election about to take place, he asked for heavy discounts in all the banks, and obtained the sum that he wanted viz. one hundred thousand dollars. With this, through brokers and agents, he bought up half the capital stock of the bank.—He was now certain of success.

It Was about a week before the annual election for officers, that Mr. Anderson came into the store of Mr. Walton, and said—

'Haven't you fifty shares of stock in the Eagle Bank, friend Walton.'

'I have,' was the reply.

'Well won't you let me have your proxy at the next election?'

'What for?'

'We're going to put Fisher in as president.'

'You are!' in surprise.

'Yes. And we'll get him in, too. You'll let me have your proxy?'

'No, that I will not. I wouldn't trust Fisher with a house full of millstones. Didn't he swindle you some years ago?'

'Oh, but that's all past and gone, Mr. Walton. I believe he's an honest man.'

'And yet you were cheated by him? I dont' undestand such kind of honest men exactly.'

'It has been one of the most pleasing recollections of my life,' replied Anderson, with enthusiasm, 'that I refrained from an exposure of that transaction—that I acted out the principle of not resisting evil. Had I then brought that matter to light, his character would have been blasted inevitably, and look what a useful man in society would have been ruined.'

'He'll do more harm before he dies than twenty of your non-resistance people can mend if you lived to be as old as Methuselah—mark my word for that. This scheming to get himself elected president of the Eagle Bank portends no good. That's my opinion.'

'So you won't let him have your vote?'

'No, indeed, that I will not, and, moreover, if he gets in I will sell out my stock immediately.'

In due course of time the election came on, and Fisher was declared president. For five years from that period he run a brilliant career, inducing even prudent men to enter into his schemes. Then came a heavy crash, involving hundreds in loss, and far to many in utter ruin. For the latter two years of that period, he had but a nominal board of directors, who were his tools; and they deceived the public by a show of supervision over the affairs of the institution, while they had no more control, or even a correct knowledge of them, than the man in the moon.

The excitement occasioned by the failure of the bank made a legal investigation necessary.—This was at once instituted, and developed a system of fraud and imposition that astounded the whole community. Among other things that came out, was the issue of nearly five hundred thousand dollars by the president, which never passed through the bank, and had, of course, been used for his private ends. During most of the time, he had lived in a style of princely splendour, and had reigned the little autocrat of the monetary circle.

The whole result was, that hundreds of persons lost their all either as stockholders, depositors, or operators, with and under Fisher; among these was Mr. Anderson himself. As for Fisher, he escaped the penitentiary only by the aid of money which he had managed to retain really, through not apparently, and upon which he afterwards lived at his ease.

It was during the excitement of these proceedings that Mr. Walton and Mr. Anderson again met.

'So his majesty has been uncloaked at last,' remarked the former.

'And shown to be a scoundrel double-dyed in in the wool,' replied Anderson with bitterness.

'As I always said he was since you related to me the manner in which he took the advantage of you several years ago.'

'And if I had not been a fool I might have been sure of it too. As it is, I have been ruined by my blind confidence in a man whom I had the best reason in the world for distrusting.'

'If you alone were the sufferer,' Mr. Walton said with some little severity in his manner, 'it would be well, for you deserve to suffer; but the distress which that scoundrel has wrought in this community is really heart-sickening. And for all this, I hold you, sir, to be almost as much to blame as Fisher.'

'Me, sir!' ejaculated Anderson in surprise and indignation.

'Yes, sir, you! Had you, as a lover of order and justice, for their own sakes, protected this community by an exposeure of the fraud practised upon you, and thus put the people on their guard, you would have saved many a widow and orphan from being robbed, and many an honest man from the loss of his all. But instead of this, you covered up and concealed, from mere external considerations, and for the sake of appearances, his crime, when I warned you of the danger of doing so, and showed you that you were acting from narrow and erroneous views of things; and not only so, but gave him your countenance and support in his grandest scheme of villany. But it's no use for me to preach now. The horse is stolen, and to lock the stable door would be an idle ceremony.'

Anderson turned away in silence, painfully conscious that he had his own share of the responsibilitd of Fisher's too successful villany to bear.

OXFORD DEMOCRAT.

PARIS, SEPTEMBER 26, 1843.

"The great popular party is already rallied almost en masse around the banner which is leading the party to its final triumph. The few that still lag will soon be put into the ample folds. On that banner is inscribed: FREE TRADE; LOW DUTIES; NO DEBT; SEPARATION FROM BANKS; ECONOMY; RETRENCHMENT; AND STRICT ADHERENCE TO THE CONSTITUTION. Victory in such a cause will be great and glorious; and if its principles be faithfully and firmly adhered to, after it is achieved, much will it redound to the honor of those by whom it will have been won; and long will it perpetuate the liberty and prosperity of the country."—Calhoun.

FOR PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.
JOHN C. CALHOUN,
Subject to the decision of a National Convention.

REP. TO CONGRESS—4TH DISTRICT.

It is still doubtful whether there has been an election of Rep. to Congress from this District. If the Lincoln towns gave Andrews a majority of 200 or 300, as represented by the Bath Inquirer, he is elected.—But if the vote in those towns is a tie or nearly so, as represented by the Bath Telegraph, there is no election. We have received the following additional returns from Oxford towns.

	And's.	Morse.	Cone.	Scat.
Byron,	41	10
Dixfield,	140	43	9	2
Mexico,	71	11		4
Roxbury,	26	3		8
Hamlin's Grant,	9	2		2
Holmes' Plantation,	20
Franklin Plantation,	20	3		8

Several Plantations and the town of Hanover are to be heard from. If the returns which we have received from the Oxford towns are correct, Andrews received 231 votes less than Morse and scattering. If therefore the Plantations to be heard from gave Andrews 50 majority, and it be true, as the Inquirer states, that Lincoln gave him a clear majority of 250, he is elected. If any person possesses the true returns from all the places in the Oxford part of the District, and will send them to us, we will send him a copy of our paper and our thanks besides.

The votes in all the above towns except the last stand for Gov.—Anderson, 227. Robinson, 68.

☞ The Lincoln Telegraph says, "In this County from the best estimates we can make, we think Andrews goes out of the County with 100 at least against him."

The Bath Inquirer, which has as good an opportunity of knowing the truth in this matter, says, "He," [Mr. A.] "has a clear majority in Lincoln County of between two and three hundred." Which is right?

Removal of the U. S. Troops from Forts Kent and Fairfield.

Two companies of U. S. Troops stationed at these Forts have been removed by order of the Secretary of War.

On account of the defenceless state of the inhabitants on the St. Johns from the junction of the St. Francis to the Province of New Brunswick, many distinguished citizens of the eastern portion of this State have thought it inexpedient that these troops should have been removed. A meeting was recently held in Bangor to remonstrate against this measure. A committee of seven, of whom Hon. Gorham Parks was Chairman, was selected to draft a memorial to the Secretary of War. They have performed that duty,—portraying the defenceless state of the inhabitants—the want of civil jurisdiction, and the depredations to which the timber in that region will be subject by the unwarrantable permits which have been granted to certain men by Provincial Authorities; and they close by asking that two Companies of U. S. Troops may be stationed on the St. John Frontier.

☞ Our friends will be pleased to see among the Democrats returned to the Legislature the name of DAVID DUNN, Esq., of Poland, the popular speaker of the present House of Representatives. He received 263 votes more than all his competitors.

Cattle Show.—This annual Exhibition occurs at this place on the 18th day of next month. Our Farmers should begin to prepare for it.

THE GERRYMANDER.—With all the drumming of the Whig Journals—the Bath Telegraph and Kennebec Journal, on the people of Lincoln the Democrats have more than held their own. For on the votes for Governor the Democrats have a clear majority of 200 or 300, and it is not yet known but they have a majority for Rep. to Congress. The falsehoods which have been put in circulation about the bond, the Gerrymander, the corruption of certain innocent men, has recoiled upon their own heads.

No choice of Representatives in Portland at the 2d trial, except Mr. Little may be elected. No choice in Bangor, Gardiner, Bath, Saco, Westbrook and Standish. In Waterville, Ex-President Fay, (fed.) is elected. Bowdoinham, John Patten, (fed.) Brunswick, Benj. H. Meder, (fed.) Buxton, Charles Watts, (dem.)

We have received the following additional returns.

	Anderson.	Robinson.	Appleton.
Waterford,	101	48	48
Hanover,	20	18

Representative. Waterford, &c., Josiah Monroe, Democrat.

There was a slight error in the footing of Aroostook copied from another paper and given on Wednesday. Right, it stands, Anderson, 512, Robinson, 277.

This intelligence varies our footings so that they now stand, as follows:

Anderson.	Robinson.	Kavanagh.	Ad & Scat.
27266	19131	3119	5729

This reduces the majority against the democratic candidate in the towns heard from, to 713.

In the towns and plantations to be heard from, Mr. Fairfield's majority, last year, over all others, was 2,596 out 8,868votes thrown.

Mr. Anderson must, therefore, lose 1883 from this majority in ordor to be defeated, or about one in every five votes last year thrown—a proportion considerably greater than characterizes his loss thus far.

We think, therefore, that the probabillity of his election is very strong.—American.

EXTENSIVE FORGERIES IN PETERSHAM, MASS.

The Barre Gazette contains an account of a series of extensive forgeries committed by William Goddard, who is the postmaster at Petersham and also a member of several trading and manufacturing firms. The amount of forged paper exceeds FORTY-ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS! The forgeries were discovered almost simultaneously in New York and Ware; and Goddard, on being arrested, confessed his criminality.

He confesses fully the perpetration of the crime and entirely absolves his partners, who are gentleman of high standing, from all knowledge of its commission. Of the proceeds of the forgeries, $15,000 was used for William Goddard & Co., $17,000 for Goddard's private debts; $5,200 for Hildreth & Goddard. The intention undoubtdly was to take up the paper as it became due—as he already had the $4000.

Mr. Goddard was arested on Sunday morning and taken before Jared Weed, Esq. He pleaded guilty, and was ordered to recognize in $5000 for his appearance before the criminal court on the last Monday of this month. The bail was furnished by his father, father-in-law and brother-in-law, and he is now at liberty.

The small amount of bail is certainly noticeable. $37,000 of this forged paper is now out, and yet he is let off on $5000 bail!! The bail will be paid, and that will be the end of the matter.

HOW TO MAKE A ROMP STEADY. The lady-editor of the Transcript gives the following. Coming from that source, it is entitled to great consideration;—"The last number of 'The Ladies' Companion" contains a story the best part of which is the advice contained in what it might be taken for its moral. The tale depicts a gay thoughtless girl, full of fun, frolic, and adventure with impulsive energies and a good heart—a 'regular high-flyer,' as Aunt Heppy called her. The girl got married, made a good wife, and a thorough manager in household matters, and the denouement proved that "it was the best way to serve young folks as you do the emptings-jug—keep the cork a little loose 'till the first working is over!" This is not bad advice. A girl who is too indolent to be harmlessly mischievous, is generally too stuped to be energetic; and it is the very same ingredients dispositioir which creates the romp, that makes the thrifty wife—the industrious mother—the good housekeeper. But don't tame down the gay girl, ere her childhood has approached to maturity."

COL. BENTON. The coon prints have been very industriously circulating the story, that Mr. Benton had said he would not support Mr. Calhoun for the Presidency, even if he should be nominated by the Democratic National Convention. This is falsehood of their own coining.—On a late occasion Col. Benton used the following language, which does not sound much like opposition to the nominee of the Convention even if it is not his first choice. 'Whoever may be nominated by the convention will be a good democrat and true man, and will receive the support of the democratic party, let that nominee be whom he may, and no fear need be entertained as to his success.'

The Skowhegan Clarion of Monday last, says: "There is no election of officers in this [Somerset] county, with the exception of J. Gould, Esq., for Clerk of Courts.

MARRIAGE EXTRAORDINARY. The Norfolk Herald chronicles the marriage of a young couple, 25 years old, to a widow lady, about 90. The bridegroom has to be carred about in the arms, like an infant, and is quite as helpless in every respect; while the bride is a woman worth some $25,000. "Every one to his taste," adds the Post.

It is stated in the New York Courier that both Mr. Bates and Mr. Choate, members of the U. S. Senate from Massachusetts, have offered to resign in favor of Mr. Webster, but that the latter will no consent.
